

The Making of SISTEMA

SISTEMA by Lievore Altherr Molina
Integrated Modular design for a constantly evolving market

The SISTEMA collection came about from the idea of producing an upholstered modular sofa system that could be adapted to either private or contract applications. This project, which combines a dynamic contemporary design sensibility with economies of scale, ultimately came to fruition after several years in development through the collaboration of Viccarbe with the Barcelona based international design studio Lievore Altherr Molina.

The technical and logistical challenges of designing a modular seating system have been elegantly solved through a rigorous and integrated design approach based on a combination of common and changeable elements.

"Sistema is basically composed of 6 individual seating/backrest modules the main variables of which are the height of the backrest and the width of the seat. These modules are assembled over a shared modular metal base, designed in such a way to accommodate the greatest range of compositions, guaranteeing a solid support and easy assemblage."

A series of accessories such as arm rests, legs and trays together with a wide choice of fabrics allow the sofa to be customised to suit individual project requirements. Thanks to its highly customisable concept SISTEMA provides elegance and comfort both within the home and more public commercial spaces. One of the most revolutionary aspects of the design is its open-ended character; each year new elements will be produced in order to provide additional options. SISTEMA is therefore a living product capable of expanding with accessories and components over time, meeting the demands of the evolving market.
